

NANCY SHAVER

Dress the Form

June 26 - August 19, 2016

OPENING RECEPTION: Sunday, June 26,
2016 6-8PM

A compression of hierarchy is the wish. Intelligence is attained through material labor and institutional learning equally. Shaver asks that this be acknowledged by showing us what can be seen. There is no top down or bottom up. There are only things. Every suggestion has been considered. Any reaction is reconcilable, and even the most contrary is welcome.

It would be wrong to say that the found objects in this show are selected for their charged history of use. Instead, they are chosen for the signifiers that lie right on the surface and not the ones shrouded in mystery. Sentiment is not an aesthetic, but is a given of existence. Age is fact.

Complications and modern problems are fact. Decoration marries the form, so often created for need and function.

A Ugandan football made from shopping bags and rubber bands rests against a Victorian vase is overshadowed by a chenille rooster clearly chosen for its color in relation to the base. Like skating on a roller rink, all levels of skill, class, age, and belief move in the same direction, on the same plane, passing one another, falling down, getting back up, acknowledging and applauding, for the sake of living.

-Jared Buckhiester

I loved my country, but I could not respect it, could not, upon my soul, be reconciled to my country as it was. And I loved my work, had a great respect for the craft which I was compelled to study, and wanted it to have some human use. It was beginning to be clear to me that these two loves might, never, in my life, be reconciled: no man can serve two masters.

-James Baldwin

This will be Nancy Shaver's (b. 1946) first solo exhibition at Derek Eller Gallery. In 2015 she opened Reconciliation, a solo exhibition at The Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art, Ridgefield, CT. Shaver's work has recently been featured in Greater New York, MoMA PS1, Queens, NY, as well as Robert Gober's The Heart is not a Metaphor at MoMA, New York NY.
