

Frieze Art Fair at Randalls Island Park Offers a Bit of Everything

By Ken Johnson and Martha Schwendener

May 14, 2015

With 198 commercial dealers and three nonprofit galleries displaying all kinds of modern and contemporary art under its white, quarter-mile-long tent, the fourth annual New York edition of the Frieze Art Fair on Randalls Island is a lot for even two critics to cover, but we gave it our best effort. This year offered more opportunities for visitors to participate in specific artworks, and circled back to the careers of overlooked women artists from earlier periods. Here are some things that caught our eyes.

Ken Johnson

TIF SIGFRIDS (B27): ZACHARY LEENER

For something more current in ceramic sculpture, consider Mr. Leener's vividly colorful, cartoonish works, which appear equally animate and inanimate. He's a worthy heir to the tradition of West Coast Funk.